- The Independent
About The Sun Does Shine

At age 29, Anthony Ray Hinton was wrongfully charged with robbery and murder, and sentenced to death by electrocution for crimes he didn’t commit. The only thing he had in common with the perpetrator was the colour of his skin. For 30 years, he was in solitary confinement and on death row. He watched as others marched to their deaths, always anticipating his own. Award Winning Lawyer Bryan Stevenson of the Equal Justice Initiative worked for 15 years to have Anthony exonerated. The Sun Does Shine chronicles his thoughts and his journey to being set free. This story reveals the inherent bias towards people of colour within the American legal and criminal justice system but also tells of the resilience of the human spirit.
